This Book of Poetry is Filled with Words of Imagination, Love and Live

Relatively Speaking, a new book by Anna Greer and Imogene Hamilton, has been released by Dorrance Publishing Co., Inc.

This eloquent collection of poetry reflects a variety of life experiences.

About the Authors

Anna Greer is a mother of one adult child and proud grandmother of one. She has worked more than twenty-five years for the same company. She volunteers with a youth organization that develops young minds.

Early on, Anna discovered her love for words on paper, first with her love of reading and eventually with her love of writing. When she couldn't give voice to her thoughts and feelings, she knew she could write them and allow her imagination to take her other places. She used the written word when she couldn't quite explain what she was feeling. This book is a journey of her love, life, and thoughts. Her hope is that readers enjoy taking this journey with her.

Imogene Hamilton, the mother of three, is a Licensed Professional Counselor and Hospice Volunteer. Discovering in early adulthood a love for poetry, she began to express her life in the form of short stories and poems. For many years, with the goal of bringing joy, laughter, motivation, and spirituality into the lives of others, Imogene has shared her writings with friends, family, co-workers and strangers. Those on the receiving end consider her work as precious keepsakes. This is her first publication
